The receipts and shipments since Saturday were light. The figures in the visible supply statement were closely scanned as they came in, and the market waited without moving much for the result, but gradually strengthened. When it began to indicate a decreae of about 150,000 bushels the price got up to 57% cents for May, and stood at that for a minute or two before turning down again. The visible supply statement showed a decrease of 510,000 bushels, the burned wheat in Toledo being wired out of it. The total is now $8,561,000 bushels. A year ago there was an increase of 510,000 bushels. The price near the close touched 57% cents.

THE BLOUSE OF TO-DAY. It Is No Longer Cheap and Ill-Fitting, for It Has the Sanction of Fashion.

Cheap little shirts are no longer in demand. The day was when a blouse meant a shirt of cambric or muslin, which could be worn with the skirt of a summer dress when a lined bodice seemed too thick. It was a comfortable thing also for wear under an outdoor jacket. A little later and it came out in woolens, warm enough for winter, but it remained humble and unpretending-quite the poor relative of tha stately, more expensive waist, made to match the rest of the gown. Then it took an aspiring fit, and determined to push forward in the world.

The blouse of to-day is a costly thing, fashioned in velvet, satin, moire antique. It actually dines out, it goes to theaters, and has become one of those elegant personal requisites which no society woman can manage to do without. If you want a blouse to wear with one of those everlasting black silk skirts which has survived its original bodice, have a velvet or satin blouse to

It is almost impossible to enter a store without becoming the purchaser of a blouse. You may only require a paper of pins, but you will be decoyed to the blouse department, and once there, your fate is scaled. If one suc cessfully resists the pink cambric with its polka dot, it is only to succumb to the seductive graces of the shot silk There is a sort of fascination about these garments. The girl who one takes to blouses never quite gives them up again. It is a mania, and must run its course ere one can expect to see the plain gown waist and skirt in one re stored to us.

The blouse is an incalculable boon to the girl who knows how to put on her things, but it is fraught with disaster to a careless wearer. Considerable judg ment must be exercised in the purchase or that pleasant flutter of excitement which always thrills a woman who has made a good bargain will be succeeded by a down-sinking of the heart as she finds herself the owner of a blouse that too wide at the neck, too short a waist or sleeve and of gigantic propor tions in the shoulder piece. Our shirt factories are turning out these blouses by the dozen, and as the supreme ob ject of the wholesale makers appears to be economy of material, the difficulty of obtaining a satisfactory fit is a great as in any other ready-made gar ment: no amount of pulling and twitching will get a badly made blouse into Try Electric Bitters as a remedy for your

Paul With Less Than Ten Thousan Shares to Its Credit Lifeless at Best and

New York, Dec. 31.—The last day of the year 1894, was about the dullest of any full business day of the entire twelve months, and on few, if any, days has the speculation been more uninteresting. The total sales barely exceeded 56,660 shares, and St. Paul, with sales of 8,560 shares to its credit, was most active of the whole list. There were periods of extreme stagna-tion during the day and at no timbe was there any animation. Fluctuations were confined within narrow limits.

The general market opened heavy and except for a slight rally about II o'clock, was weak during the mornig. The de-pression continued into the afternoon until 2 o'clock when the temper of specu-lation changed for the better and a rally of small proportions took place, in which, iation changed for the better and a rally of small proportions took place, in which, however, only part of the early losses were regained. Washington, Dec. 31.—Lieutenant Frank H. Newcomb of the United States revenue cutter service and assistant inspector of the first and second life saving districts, acting under instructions of General Superintendent Kimball of the life saving service, has investigated and made a report on a scheme having for its declared object the benefit of the life savers along the Atlantic coast. The plan has resulted in the publication of a "Historical Souvenir of the Life Saving Service of the United States," which, unless it is prohibited, will be put on sale at the several life saving stations along the coast. It is alleged that less than 25 per cent of the amounts paid by sympathetic subscribers will ever reach the life savers themselves and the remaining 75 per cent of the receipts goes into the pockets of the promoters. The whole scheme is condemned by life saving officials and it may be that steps will be taken to prevent anyone con-nected with the service from having anything further to do with the mat-

Fiorida Blixzard Loss.

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. B.—The first reports of Florida's loss in citrus fruits, from the extraordinary cold snap that risited this state three days ago, was not exaggerated. The best estimates from the loss in oranges was $5.00.00 without counting young orange trees killed and the general destruction of pineappies, hamanas and winter vegetables, which must make heavy additional losses. The most careful computation is that $1.00.00 bexes were on the trees. President Fairbanks, of the Florida Exchange, says practically all is destroyed. Some south of Punta Gorda may be shipped but this is inconsiderable. He regards the season as ended. An average box of oranges would bring in the market $1.75, so that the loss on $3.00.00 boxes to the growers, to labor engaged in the boxing and shipping or transportation or commission would amount to $2.20.00. No estimate has been made on loss to other fruits and vegetables and there will be no way of telling about the new orange groves for a month or six weeks, when the trees, if affected by the cold, split the bark or show "die back" at the top. The snap is not without compensation, however, as it has largely killed the scale, one of the deadliest orange pests, and exterminated another, the white fly, which was the deadliest orange pests, and extermi-nated another, the white fly, which was becoming active in some groves and threatened the state.

STRIPPED BY LIGHTNING. The Startling Experience of a Mo-Charles B. Hoffman, of Butte, Mont. was standing at the mouth of a mine not long ago when he was struck by lightning. The thunderbolt, he thinks, first struck the straw hat he was wearing, and it tore a hole in the hat that cut part of the rim. Then it tore his clothing into shreds and left him naked. Both his overalls and the shirt he was wearing presented the appearance of having passed through a sausage mill. Nobody can tell him why he was not killed by the lightning. The bolt, he says, after passing through his hat, struck him on the shoulder and ran the full length of his body, burning the skin to a crisp on the side and lega. It also cut his left foot on the side and bottom, breaking the bones of "My clothes were torn to pieces and thrown from my body," said Mr. Hoff-man to a writer for the New York World, "and my shoes were torn from my feet."

He became unconscious as soon as he was atruck by the lightning and did not revive for an hour and a half. When he regained his senses Hoffman was in great pain and he was confined to the hospital for nine weeks. When Hoffman's clothing was examined after the accident it was seen that in many places the lightning had cut the cloth us neatly as if it had been done with a razor. Some of the cuts were long and straight. The lightning took his clothes off quicker than he could have undressed himself, and it threw them in a pile on one side of the truck, with his shoes carefully deposited beside the pile. The clothes seemed to have been neatly folded until they were examined and found to be a pile of rags. Hoffman's "pants" had been yanked of him without the formality of pulling them over his feet. This seemingly im-possible task was accomplished by the lightning first cutting each leg open, and then it appeared to have taleen them by the seat and dropped them on the cost, and to finish the job by depositing Mr. Hoffman's straw hat on top of all. After it got through with Hoffman this remarkable streak of lightning ran along a metal track into the Glengary mino, at the mouth of which he had been working, ran to the end of the shaft, which is four hundred feet below the surface of the ground, and then it ran along a "cross cut" two hundred feet where it branched off and for sixty feet followed a "winze." There were several men at work at this point and all were more or less stunned. The bolt of lightning went into the earth when it reached the end of the "winze." Hoffman is now known in

Butte as "the human lightning rod"
